

Refugee Counselling and Advocacy

The Refugee Counselling and Advocacy program specialises in counselling and support for people who have experienced trauma prior to arrival in Australia as refugee and asylum seekers.

Refugees can experience many challenges which can be processed as trauma, and can cause anxiety, a sense of helplessness, and/or depression. Often most profound can be the sense of loss and grief for loved ones and family members who are still in the country of origin. Our Refugee Counselling and Advocacy team are experienced, empathetic and understanding and have the skills to help refugees overcome their trauma. This service is free and available to those who have entered Australia on a humanitarian protection visa (refugee), or as an asylum seeker (seeking protection from persecution).
